Project Start Date
Jan 01, 2017

Project End Date
Feb 03, 2017

Project Abstract
The aim is to provide funding to support the third annual FMA consortium for emerging European scholars. The goals of the Consortium are to provide a forum to:
1. Present high quality new and unpublished research on institutional trading, hedge funds, and related topics.
2. Bring together younger scholars working on institutional trading, hedge funds, and related topics and help them benefit from engaging with each other and gaining exposure to more senior faculty.
Distinguished members of the finance profession, and practitioners will provide feedback to presenters and discuss research issues and aspects of academic publishing and career development.

Activities and Achievement
The workshop was held at JBS on February 2nd, 2017 and it was a great success. We had 7 papers presented in the workshop, each discussed by top academics from Europe and the US. The keynote speaker was professor Miguel Ferreira (Nova).

The room was packed with people with about 30 people in total (21 registered participants). In the opening / closing remarks we noted CERF's support to help the event.

Dissemination
One of the papers presented was recently accepted to the Journal of Finance, while all others are working papers are aimed at top Finance journals.
