

My paper titled “Does Bank Scope Improve Monitoring Incentives in Syndicated Lending?” and joint with Daniel Neuhann has been revised and is available from:

<http://www.farzadsaidi.com/papers/Scope.pdf>

Furthermore, the paper has been presented at the following venues and conferences:

ESMT Berlin (Finance seminar), University of Zurich (Jean-Charles Rochet’s banking theory seminar) and the 2016 EuroFIT Research Workshop on Syndicated Loans (London Business School).

I have finished a major revision of my work on informal finance, titled “Informal Finance, Risk Sharing, and Networks: Evidence from Hunter-Gatherers”. The paper can be found here:

http://www.farzadsaidi.com/papers/networks_finance_devo.pdf

It has been presented multiple times, most recently at INSEAD (Economics seminar) and the European Bank for Reconstruction and Development (EBRD) in London.

Both papers are currently under submission at top finance and economics journals.
